

Train 5 left Surbiton at 9:00. I just caught this one by running over the footbridge and gambling that the train, which was heading for Basingstoke, was stopping at Woking. The scrolling display that lists the stopping stations was displaying a message about how many carriages the train had as the whistle was being blown. It did stop at Woking, as most trains which pass through do stop there. Good.

Train 6 got me to Guildford at 9:32. I was quite tempted to stay on it as it was going back home, to Portsmouth.

Train 4 took me to Surbiton where I could catch a train which avoided the line with a tree

Train 2 from Sutton to Epsom was fine. It got me to Epsom at about 7:55, leaving around 20 minutes until the Guildford train. I contemplated staying on until Dorking, where I could walk to Dorking (deepdene) for a train to Guildford, but that would clearly be silly as a Guildford train would be along in 20 minutes.

Train 1 left Sydenham at 7:02. It was supposed to go all the way to Guildford, but only got as far as Sutton before terminating as apparently it had broken down. There was no announcement as to what we should do, but a helpful ticket inspector correctly guided me to the Dorking train, telling me to change at Epsom for a Guildford service.

Train 3 left Epsom at about 8:15 (I should have been in Guildford a few minutes after 8 from the original train). It got as far as Effingham Junction at which point we were told the train would terminate as there was a tree across the line ahead. There was no indication when services might resume, though there might be replacement bus service at some point. I run across the footbridge to catch a northbound train.
